

Hotel bars have always provided fabled watering holes for distinguished travelers. With that, I welcome you to the legendary Grant Grill, home of much San Diego culinary heritage and progressively created modern cocktails and cuisine. Through this menu, we present what is the latest chapter in a curated experience that spans beyond 10 decades. In the spirit of embracing new cultures, Grant Grill is launching a Voodoo themed cocktail menu on the day of the Haitian Rara festival – which is sure to surprise and delight. Additionally, we will donate a portion of proceeds to Hope for Haiti, the leading charity organization in the region. I hope that your experience here will become one of many stories that have already played out in this timeless environment. Take a moment to explore all of our offerings – created with the notion not only to honor the past of this iconic building, but also to become yet another jewel in its unrivalled history in the making.

VAUDOUX / VOODOO / VODOU

Misunderstood and often incorrectly portrayed, Voodoo has its roots in Haiti, where it is both widespread and considered a positive influence. It was later introduced into American Creole society, centered in New Orleans. In celebration of the Haitian Rara, we will be donating $1 from each cocktail to Hope For Haiti, who in turn will contribute these funds towards supplying clean water for the Haitian population.

LUCKY ALLIGATOR TOOTH $14

Often part of a Louisiana mojo bag, these teeth are meant to bring good fortune

Reserve & Vintage Beer Cellar

A collection of aged and hard-to-find premium brews. Truly for the beer connoisseur, some stronger beers are in fact preferred after a few years of cellaring.

Aged beers have integrated bubbles more similar to champagne, hoppy notes become reserved, and malty notes take on a dried fruit and umami character not apparent in younger beers. Some sediment may be apparent.
